JUST A GLIMPSE OF OLD WASHINGTON MARKET!

a Cab Come to Buy as Years Ago.

Two young women in Empire gowns stepped out of a cab at Fulton and West streets yesterday and walked into Washington Market, where the Market folks are patting themselves on the back because they are one hundred years old this week. The two came out half an hour later carrying a basket between them that looked as if it might contain a steak, a dozen eggs, some crawfish and a steak, a dozen eggs, some crawfish and a looked as if it might contain a steak, a dozen eggs, some crawfish and a looked as if it might contain a steak, a dozen eggs, some crawfish and a looked as if it might contain the looked as if it mig a steak, a dozen eggs, some crawfish and a cheese. In fact it did, and all the old timers sat down and talked about the days when on Friday and Saturday mornings there were long lines of coaches of the fashionable outside the market. and it was no unusual sight to see womer from over Gramercy Park way and Elite Fourteenth street lugging their eatable away from the market in baskets.

stands, and many a housewife put in a profitable afternoon stocking up on deli-cacles whose prices made a trip down town well worth while.

Far up above the beeves and shiny fat fish and rotund woolly lambs a band discoursed on Sally and then suddenly Daisy, Daisy, give me your answer true, one. Over by the Fulton street corner, where it says "Mrs. Hackett, oysters, clams, &c.," sits Mrs. Margaret Hackett herself, with the same delectable oyster soup to tickle one's palate that she was dishing up forty-five years ago when she first came to the market. She sits under the twenty-seven po und lobster and the whale of an alligator turtle and the scaly thing on the wall labelled "sea serpent" and talks about the early days with Peter Hassett, who's been there since 1859 and remembers when Mayor Hoffman came down to inspect the market at the time remembers when Mayor Hollman came down to inspect the market at the time that the Board of Health kicked up a fuss. Hassett tells you proudly how the Mayor squelched the Board of Health by saying that he'd never seen a cleaner place than the market and how all the market men stood up on their stalls and cheered until the old rafters wheezed.

The solitary cab horse yesterday had to stand the contemptuous proletariat sniffing of rough necked stamping truck horses and restless butcher cart steeds, and his isolation was a good index of the change of times and customers in the market.

A great many Jersey commuters sprinting down Fulton street for the 5:58 yesterday afternoon reared up at the sight of the tempting things in the market windows and were lucky if they caught the 6:20, for yesterday was the end of the week of the centennial celebration at the market and the prices were alluring.

The market was ablaze with light that showed to good effect the multitudinous flags and general spotlessness about the stands, and many a housewife put in a profitshle afternoon stocking up on delice.

000 Ask to Have Transfers Set Aside A suit to set aside transfers of property. worth $375,000, made by Cornelius H. Van Ness, who died in 1911 at the age of 91. to his third wife, Alice Wood Van Ness now 39 years old, was filed in the Supreme Court yesterday. The plaintiffs are Mrs. Harriet B. Morse and Mrs. Marie B. H.

Harriet B. Morse and Mrs. Marie B. H. Pierce, nieces of Mrs. Emma Louise Van Ness, the aged man's second wife.

The plaintiffs say that their aunt died in 1898, leaving in the possession of her husband as trustee for her heirs an estats of $349,000, which she received from her grandfather. In 1900 the present plaintiffs brought suit to restrain Mr. Van Ness from disposing of any of the trust fund, and the suit was settled by an allowance of the income of $375,000 during his lifetime, after which the principal of the fund was to go to the plaintiffs and other heirs of Mrs. Van Ness.

The complaint says that four months after the second wife of Van Ness died, when he was 79 years old, Alice Wood, daughter of a man employed in a fish market at Port Jervis, learned of the aged man's weak mental condition. feigned love for him and got him to marry her in 1900. It is charged she induced him to transfer to her all of the trust fund.

MRS. CLINTON B. FISK'S WILL.

The transfer tax appraisal of the estate of Mrs. Janette C. Fisk, who died on May 7 and who was the widow of Gen. Clinton B. Fisk, shows that she left property valued at $165,235, of which $81,017 went to her daughter, Mrs. Mary Fisk Park, and the same amount to her son, Charles A. Fisk. She left $1,00) to her grandson, Clinton B.

Fisk. She owned Standard Oil stock valued at $72,360.

Mrs. Fisk left $200 to the Oakgrove Cemetery at Coldwater, Mich., and in connection with this bequest said in her will.

It is my request that my entire family "It is my request that my entire tanny, children, grandchildren and children in law be buried there, but if this is not possible I ask that God may bring us all, a reunited family, to Himself at last."

NO BOARDING HOUSES IN SEA GATE, SAYS COURT

Ruling Helps Promoters Maintain Exclusiveness of Colony.

CAN CUT OFF THE WATER

Association Wins Fight Against Woman Who Kept Paying Guests.

According to a decision of the Appellate Division of Brooklyn yesterday the Sea Gate Association can prevent any more inns, hotels or boarding houses from setting up business within its exclusive reservation at the western end of Coney Island. The court did not say this in so many words, but it did say that while the association could not prevent any person from transforming a dwelling into a caravansary it could refuse to supply him water, sewers or any other conveniences

The decision was handed down in the ase of Mrs. Helen W. Biggs, who had obtained an injunction against the association last year because the association had threatened to turn off the water for her house and disconnect the sewers. The association declared that Mrs. Biggs had deceived them.

The association bought the land originally for a restricted residence park. It sold the land to individual members, but ordained that there should be a close scrutiny of all buyers and residents.

About three years ago it decided that there should be no more hotels or boarding houses, there being several such exclusive establishments already. Mrs. Biggs and her husband bought some property there, subject to the restrictions. and the association declared that she announced that she wanted a dwelling and nothing else.

It was a large house and when completed it was discovered that Mrs. Biggs purposed entertaining paying guests.

purposed entertaining paying guests, to which the association objected. Bartow S. Weeks and Gherardi Davis, as president and secretary of the association took action and Mrs. Biggs obtained an injunction last June. The case was taken up from the court below and the decision announced yesterday.

"The plaintiff's rights," said the court, "must depend upon such rights as she acquired as a member of the Sea Gate Association. Considering the character of such association, these rights were subject to reasonable regulation for the benefit of other members thereof. We deem the regulation adopted prior to the plaintiff's purchase and of which she had knowledge a reasonable regulation."

The court concluded that it could withdraw those facilities when it discovered the facts and ordered that the case go back to the court below for a new trial.
